

Sensation and Pleasure

Practice Four · Embodied Wellbeing · Full Script · 5 minutes (audio) / full script below

The audio version of this practice uses a shorter, condensed reading of this script. This is the complete text, with all four phases, for reading alongside the audio or using on its own.

Opening · Breath and Light · 3 minutes

Find a position that feels comfortable and private. Somewhere you won't be interrupted. This practice works with sexual sensation and pleasure. It's a genuine part of being human. There's no shame in working with this. There's no goal you have to reach.

You can hear this voice. You're breathing. Your body is here, exactly as it is. And noticing that is where this practice begins.

Take a slow breath in through your nose, and let it out through your mouth. Again. Slower. Let your breathing find its own rhythm.

Bring attention to the top of your head. The crown. Just above it, a soft point of light — felt, not pictured.

Each breath, the light moves slowly downward. Through the crown, the throat, the chest, the heart, past the navel, into the pelvic bowl. Settling, warm and golden, in the deep centre of you. Patient. Alive.

Phase One · The Ideal Being · 3 minutes

A figure begins to form in front of you. Whoever this figure is for you — knowing this practice is about pleasure and sensation, choose a figure who can hold that work without judgement.

This figure has a body that feels. Sensation moves through them freely. Pleasure is welcome. Sexuality is woven through them, not separate. You watch them — they sit quietly, breathing softly, with warmth in their pelvic centre. The sensation is information and pleasure both.

The figure moves toward you. Steps into you. And at some point, gently, the distance closes without your noticing. You are them. Their capacity for sensation is yours. Their embodied pleasure is yours. You feel from inside the warmth in the pelvic centre. Not chasing. Not performing. Just being a body that can feel.

Phase Two · The Pathway · 3 minutes

Now we move closer in. Begin at the brain — the parts that process pleasure are there, alive, always. Pleasure is generated by the brain as much as by the body. Follow the line down through the spinal cord to the sacral level — where genital sensation lives.

There are nerves leaving the spinal cord here. Branching outward. Reaching the genitals — whatever your body looks like. Reaching the inner thighs. The perineum. The deep pelvic floor.

Gently — bring awareness to that whole region. Just listening. Whatever you feel or don't feel is what's there. Bring breath into the space. With each in-breath, the warmth grows. With each out-breath, it spreads outward. Pleasure as a quality of attention, not an event. Whatever sensations arise — warmth, tingling, pulsing, or quiet — welcome them without judgement. Feel the whole circuit, brain to body and back.

Closing · Breath and Light · 3 minutes

Return to the breath. The light is still in the pelvic bowl. The work is settling in. The pathways you traced are real.

Your body moves through natural rhythms all day. About every 90 minutes, your mind drifts. These moments are also when sensation becomes more available. Return for a breath or two to the warmth in the pelvic centre. And each time you return, the warmth is a little easier to find.

At night, drifting toward sleep, the practice is especially potent. A few breaths of pelvic warmth as you fall asleep carries the work into your dreams. The same is true when you first wake.

Take one more slow breath in. Let it out. Notice the room. Your body is yours. Your sensation is yours. The practice continues. Thank you.

This practice is part of the Guided Imagery Programme at livingbeyondsci.com, free to use. It is not a substitute for medical advice, and does not claim to reverse or cure spinal cord injury. If any part of it increases discomfort, stop and try a different practice.