

Bladder Awareness

Practice Two · Top-Priority Function · Full Script · 5 minutes (audio) / full script below

The audio version of this practice uses a shorter, condensed reading of this script. This is the complete text, with all four phases, for reading alongside the audio or using on its own.

Opening · Breath and Light · 3 minutes

Find a position that feels comfortable. This practice works with bladder awareness — if you prefer to do it after recently emptying your bladder, that's a good idea. But there's no wrong time.

These words are reaching you. Your breath is moving on its own, the way it always does. And noticing that is already the first step.

Take a slow breath in through your nose, and let it out through your mouth. Again. Slower. Let your breathing find its own rhythm.

Bring attention to the top of your head. The crown. Just above it, a soft point of light — felt, not pictured. The way you'd feel warm sun on your scalp. Each in-breath, the light brightens. Each out-breath, it settles deeper.

Now let the light begin to travel. Slowly, with each breath, downward. Through the crown, the throat, the chest. Settling in the bowl of your pelvis. The lower belly. A soft golden warmth pooling there. And as the warmth pools, the whole pelvic bowl can soften.

Phase One · The Ideal Being · 3 minutes

A figure begins to form in front of you. Whoever this figure is for you. This figure has a body that works the way bodies work — their bladder fills, signals clearly, empties when chosen. No urgency. No accident. No fear. Just a calm, working system.

The figure moves toward you. Steps into you. And somewhere in that movement, without a clear moment of crossing, watching becomes being. You are the figure. Their calm working system is yours. You feel from inside the quiet awareness in your lower belly. The signal as information, not alarm. The warmth of the light still there in the pelvic bowl, settling everything.

Phase Two · The Pathway · 3 minutes

Now we move closer in. Begin at the brain — the part that has always known how the bladder is. Follow the line down through the back of your neck, the length of the spinal cord, past the chest and lower back, to the very base of the spinal cord. The sacral level. Where the bladder lives.

This is where the conversation happens. Signals come up from the bladder. Signals go down from the brain. Feel the nerves leaving the spinal cord, branching outward, reaching the bladder and the pelvic floor.

Gently — bring awareness to the bladder. Just listen. Then send the gentle intention to soften the pelvic floor. The intention to release. Then reverse it — the gentle intention to hold, the pelvic floor lifting just slightly. Whatever happens or doesn't happen on the outside doesn't matter. The signal is real. Feel the whole circuit, in both directions. Yours.

Closing · Breath and Light · 3 minutes

Return to the breath. The light is still in the pelvic bowl. Warm. Present. The work is settling in. The signals you sent are real.

Your body moves through natural rhythms all day. About every 90 minutes, your mind drifts. When you feel that drift, you can return for a breath or two to the warmth in the pelvic bowl.

At night, as you drift toward sleep, the practice is especially potent. A few breaths of pelvic awareness as you fall asleep carries the work into your dreams. The same is true when you first wake.

Take one more slow breath in. Let it out. Notice the room. The light is yours. The pathway is yours. The practice continues. Thank you.

This practice is part of the Guided Imagery Programme at livingbeyondsci.com, free to use. It is not a substitute for medical advice, and does not claim to reverse or cure spinal cord injury. If any part of it increases discomfort, stop and try a different practice.